The Zuni Youth Enrichment Project’s 2021 Summer Camp Concluded July 16 with Special Celebration

The Zuni Youth Enrichment Project’s 2021 Summer Camp concluded on Friday, July 16 with an end-of-camp celebration. Sixty-five campers, 19 counselors, family members, and ZYEP staff came together for this special day, which included a dance performance and a Summer Camp project gallery.

Campers ages 7 to 12 performed corn, hunter, and butterfly dances, wearing back scarves and leggings they made themselves. Not only had the young people practiced these dances for the duration of the four-week Summer Camp, activity instructors Tiana Cachini, Kallen Quetawki, and Enric Tsalaite taught them the importance of the Zuni people’s Udena:we (traditional regalia) and how to craft garments they could keep for future use — and future generations.

The end-of-camp celebration also allowed campers to showcase their projects from the camp’s STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math), contemporary art, fetish carving, and nutrition/agriculture classes.

Norene Lonasee and Kristine Juarez led solar and lunar activities during the STEM classes. Campers learned about solar energy and the phases of the moon while connecting those concepts to the cultural significance they carry, related to the Zuni cultural calendar. They made lunar phase charts, model lunar landers, solar robots, and solar ovens.

In contemporary art, instructors Keith Edaakie and Leanne Lee led projects such as paint pouring, flip-book animation, tie dye, and more. Jeff Shetima and Daryl Shack Sr. taught fetish carving, sharing the cultural importance of the animals and the art form.

The ZYEP food sovereignty team, led by Food Sovereignty Coordinator Jessica Quinlan, taught nutrition and agriculture. Campers learned to make blue corn pancakes, black bean burgers, and fruit-infused water. During the gardening component, they were able to plant their own corn seed starts, and they learned the importance of water and seeds.

“Summer Camp also included a physical activity component, led by Josh Kudrna, who is our physical activity coordinator, and Michael Owaleon Sr.,” said Tahlia Natachu, ZYEP’s youth development coordinator. “They played a variety of games, and they partnered with Wings of America for a running camp and Silver Stallion from Gallup, New Mexico, for a biking camp.”

In addition, singers and drummers Edward Lewis, Brolan Niiha, and Zander Cellicion taught campers songs, dance moves, and the cultural education behind the moves.

“We are deeply grateful for these partners, and the opportunity to be part of the campers’ summer break,” Natachu said. “We are honored to serve these wonderful kids, and their families. It’s our privilege to be able to learn, have fun, and make memories together.

“We’re also grateful to the families, who trusted us with their children,” she continued. “One family member told us they were happy with the variety of activities, and that their camper had something good to say each day and looked forward to getting up early for camp. That means everything to us.”

Summer Camp proved to be a valuable experience for the counselors as well. These 15- to 24-year-olds completed two days of in-house training and a four-day outdoor retreat in a culturally significant area prior to the start of camp. During their time together, they took part in mental health promotion training, daily group sessions, and professional development workshops that enhance communication, leadership, team-building, and mentoring skills.

Counselor Tamika Lee said her Summer Camp experience was an extremely positive one, especially in light of the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic.

“It was really important for our kids to be able to come together after a really challenging time with Covid,” Lee said. “It was great to see them enjoy themselves doing the activities, especially dance, and hanging out with each other.”

“Tamika was amazing,” Natachu noted. “She provided her campers with love and kindness. I am super proud of the amount of growth I saw in her.”

Founded in 2009, Summer Camp was ZYEP’s first program — and it remains its flagship initiative, serving approximately 1,300 Zuni youth since its inception. The camp has become so popular, registrations for this year’s camp filled in a matter of hours.

Impact assessments reveal that campers experienced increased enjoyment of physical activity, increased consumption of fresh fruit and vegetables, improved peer and mentor relationships, and deeper connections to Zuni culture.

Executive Director Joe Claunch said supporters are still welcome to donate to the Summer Camp Fund:

“Not only is the Summer Camp Fund intended to meet the needs of the current year’s campers, it’s also designed to sustain the program into the future,” he explained. “Our goal is to raise $20,000 by July 31, and these funds will help support our 2022 Summer Camp.”
Although our community experienced an unprecedented period of suffering and loss of life with the COVID-19 pandemic, we’re blessed in receiving funds to assist us in our recovery efforts. The first allocation of funds was from the US Government through the Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security (CARES).

The most recent funding allocation for our community is part of the American Rescue Plan Act of 2021 (ARPA) which is a $1.9 trillion coronavirus rescue package designed to facilitate the United States recovery from the devastating economic and health effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. Pursuant to the ARPA, the US Treasury has launched this much-needed relief to:

- Support urgent COVID-19 response efforts to continue to decrease spread of the virus and bring the pandemic under control
- Replace lost revenue for eligible state, local, territorial, and Tribal governments to strengthen support for vital public services and help retain jobs
- Support immediate economic stabilization for households and businesses
- Address systemic public health and economic challenges that have contributed to the unequal impact of the pandemic
- The Coronavirus State and Local Fiscal Recovery Funds provide substantial flexibility for each government to meet local needs—including support for households, small businesses, impacted industries, essential workers, and the communities hardest hit by the crisis. These funds can also be used to make necessary investments in water, sewer, and broadband infrastructure.

Our tribe received a total amount of $60,264,198.72 after submitting our enrollment data to the US Treasury. After we submitted our employment data to Treasury, the tribe was allocated an additional $9,337,723.09. The total amount of funds received, $69,601,921.81.

After receiving these funds, the tribe immediately began to provide financial assistance to its enrolled members and used the funds provided for assistance to families that experienced damages due to recent heavy rains and flooding. An additional priority of the tribe is our access to broadband internet for our educational and economic needs, and the Zuni Tribal Council is actively committed to working to effectuate this need. The Pueblo of Zuni (POZ) is working on a strategic plan on the use of funds to address our community needs. The Pueblo of Zuni welcomes any positive suggestions and recommendations that can be used in the proposed strategic plan.

Some of the Pueblo of Zuni programs received separate ARPA funding to address needs of the program and community through their respective programs. Below is a listing of the funds allocated to the Pueblo of Zuni.

The Zuni Youth Enrichment Project announced today that it has received the results of its pre- and post-Summer Camp surveys. Those results reveal that the annual Summer Camp program has a positive, lasting impact on youth, counselors, and families in Zuni Pueblo.

Sixty-five campers ages 7-12 enjoyed ZYEP’s 13th annual Summer Camp on June 21 to July 16. When the youth project’s staff reviewed the data from the campers’ pre- and post-camp surveys, they noticed several significant increases, particularly in the areas of enrichment, culture, physical activity, and mentorship.

“Our camp is dedicated to providing new, enriching opportunities and strengthening our young people’s connection with their culture, so we were excited to see an increase in the number of kids reporting, ‘I like to try new things,’ and ‘I feel a strong connection to Zuni culture,’” said Tahlia Natachu, ZYEP’s youth development coordinator. “We also saw a jump in the number of campers reporting that they enjoy physical activity. Moving from 71.9 percent to 92.9 percent is a huge shift.”

“Most campers reported an increase in overall happiness and in ‘I have positive people in my life that I look up to,’” she continued. “We are very proud of that one.”

Indeed, a key component of the nonprofit youth organization’s Summer Camp is its counselor development program. Prior to the start of the beloved day camp, 19 counselors ages 15-24 joined ZYEP staff for two days of in-house training, followed by a four-day outdoor retreat in a culturally significant area.

During their time together, these young people take part in mental health promotion training, daily group sessions, and professional development workshops that enhance communication, leadership, team-building, and mentoring skills. As a result, Summer Camp proves to be transformative for counselors and campers alike.

The counselors’ pre- and post-camp surveys revealed increases in connection to Zuni culture and feeling healthy. Their open responses in the survey document also share their perspectives on the impact the camp had on the campers, the community, and themselves.

“Personally, I’ve struggled with understanding who I am and what strengths and weaknesses I have,” said one counselor. “[Now] I feel like I have really learned a lot about myself, how I work in a group setting, and how I interact with people.”

“Summer Camp had an incredibly positive impact on me personally,” observed a fellow counselor. “It [taught me] how to talk to younger ones, as well as peers my age. It lit up my life. I was able to focus on something that gave me a sense of purpose. I met so many lovely people, made incredible friendships, and got to know the type of person I am and want to be.”

ZYEP also asked local families for their feedback. According to their surveys, 100 percent of families agreed that their children had fun at camp, camp improved their children’s self-confidence and overall health, and camp taught their children how to live healthy lives.

One parent also recorded an additional benefit, noting, “The children had something to do rather than staying inside and being on electronics. Thank you ZYEP for having this camp.”

Founded in 2009, Summer Camp was ZYEP’s first program — and it remains its flagship initiative, serving approximately 1,300 Zuni youth since its inception. The camp has become so popular, registrations for this year’s camp filled in a matter of hours. Summer Camp is popular with ZYEP’s supporters across the country as well. The youth project’s Summer Camp fundraiser met its $20,000 goal prior to the July 31 deadline.

The youth project continues to raise funds for Summer Camp 2022 and its many other dynamic initiatives. Supporters can make a secure contribution through the website at zyep.org/donate.

Heap Ranch continues from page 1 price for the ranch from $645,000 to $475,000. Using a portion of the settlement trust funds intended for this purpose, Zuni acquired approximately 360 acres of land, together with 284 shares of water rights stock in the St. Johns Irrigation and Ditch Company. The water shares will provide the Tribe approximately 204 acre-feet of water, on average, for its wetland restoration project at Kolthu:wala:wa. To date, Zuni has acquired approximately 2,200 acre-feet of water to fulfill the purposes of the settlement. A portion of the Heap Ranch abuts the Little Colorado River, and this land acquisition will allow the Tribe important access to the river to improve an area that often experiences water losses as the Tribe delivers its water down the river to the wetland restoration project at Kolthu:wala:wa. The Heap property is nestled within other properties with water rights previously purchased by the Tribe in furtherance of the objectives of the 2003 settlement. The settlement resolved the Tribe's water rights claims for its Arizona Reservation and provided funding for land and water rights acquisitions, wetland and riparian restoration, and ongoing protection of Zuni's sacred lands in Arizona.
Delta Variant: What to Know

- The Delta variant is more contagious:

  The Delta variant is highly contagious, more than 2x as contagious as previous variants.

- Some data suggest the Delta variant might cause more severe illness than previous strains in unvaccinated persons.

  In two different studies from Canada and Scotland, patients infected with the Delta variant were more likely to be hospitalized than patients infected with Alpha or the original virus strains.

- Unvaccinated people remain the greatest concern:

  Although breakthrough infections happen much less often than infections in unvaccinated people, individuals infected with the Delta variant, including fully vaccinated people with symptomatic breakthrough infections, can transmit it to others. CDC is continuing to assess data on whether fully vaccinated people with asymptomatic breakthrough infections can transmit. However, the greatest risk of transmission is among unvaccinated people who are much more likely to contract, and therefore transmit the virus.

- Fully vaccinated people with Delta variant breakthrough infections can spread the virus to others. However, vaccinated people appear to be infectious for a shorter period:

  Previous variants typically produced less virus in the body of infected fully vaccinated people (breakthrough infections) than in unvaccinated people. In contrast, the Delta variant seems to produce the same high amount of virus in both unvaccinated and fully vaccinated people. However, like other variants, the amount of virus produced by Delta breakthrough infections in fully vaccinated people also goes down faster than infections in unvaccinated people. This means fully vaccinated people are likely infectious for less time than unvaccinated people.

Since its founding, the Zuni Youth Enrichment Project has been dedicated to honoring Zuni culture and traditional life ways in all its youth programs and spaces. One of those vital Zuni traditions is physical activity.

Through its Youth Sport initiative, the nonprofit youth organization connects with more than 500 youth annually. Not only are young people able to take advantage of seasonal leagues in basketball, soccer, flag football, and cross country, they also have access to mentorship through ZYEP’s staff and coaches, camaraderie with teammates throughout the leagues, and powerful community spirit.

Through mid-October, Youth Sport participants are busy with soccer season. According to Josh Kudrna, ZYEP’s physical activity coordinator, this season is a particularly joyful one.

“My favorite part of coordinating this soccer season is how happy the kids are to be spending time with friends, and coming back together to play a sport,” he explained. “Our kids were always excited to play, but there is a unique specialness to the joy and positivity that has been constant throughout this season. Getting to see their friends, interact with their coaches, and challenge themselves is having a huge impact on managing the stress and apathy we were seeing last year during virtual school.”

Kudrna observed that families are enjoying this healthy and safe social opportunity as well.

“It’s been great to see families excitedly greeting each other after being apart for so long, and seeing how many members of our community are coming to the games to support our kids,” he said. “There is such a strong spirit of community here. I see it at every practice and at every game.”

Eleven-year-old Kaleb Bowannie is one of 12 players in this year’s ZYEP soccer league. He participates in all the Youth Sport programs, so he’ll shift to flag football once soccer ends.

“I love getting to run around and play the game, instead of just running around the house,” he said. “It makes me happy to see my friends again, and I made friends on the other teams too.”

“I love the free food, too,” he added with a grin. When asked how other communities might benefit from Youth Sport programs like this one, he was thoughtful.

“It would give them physical activity, so they can be healthy,” he said after a moment’s pause. “It would be so good for them.”

“As a parent, I think this program is very positive,” said Kaleb’s father, Daniel Bowannie. “Without ZYEP, many of our athletes would never have an opportunity to be part of a team, or to play soccer. It also brings players, coaches, and community together. It makes them one.”

Desiree Harjo, lead coach for ZYEP’s soccer league, agreed. “I was born and raised in Zuni, and growing up, I didn’t have these opportunities,” she said.

“ZYEP offers such a variety. I’m so appreciative for this on our reservation.”

Harjo has worked with local youth for years. She and her twin sister teach kindergarten for the Zuni Public School District, and they both coached volleyball at the high school. In addition to her coaching with ZYEP, Harjo also coaches softball for the Gallup league.

“I coached here with (now executive director) Joe Claunch a couple of years ago, and I came back this year because ZYEP was in need,” she said. “I love the teamwork and camaraderie, and how excited the kids are to get out and socialize, while also being safe; they’ve been great about wearing masks and maintaining physical distance. And, the games really do bring the community together to support our kids.”
